Transit watchdogs rank MTA best and worst of 2012

- Sandy, fare hike top worst list
- Praise for post-storm recovery
- New Yorkers won't soon forget the year — they'll be paying for it

GETTY IMAGES

▶ One perk from 2012: "Bus Time" isn't just for Brooklynites anymore.

The Straphangers Campaign released its third annual lists of the Top 10 best and worst MTA-related events in 2012 Thursday. Among the worst transit events of 2012 were the fare hike (another one will hit this year in March) and a 6.6 percent uptick in subway crime — as well as two pushing deaths in the month of December alone, despite a decrease overall in city crime.

Superstorm Sandy took the Top 2 worst slots: first for the general damaged incurred and second for what the repairs on those damages will cost riders — a whopping $62 million a year interest for decades.

"I think riders are likely to remember very vividly the storm and these pushing deaths," said Straphangers spokesman Gene Russianoff.

The positive list features such heartwarmers as the return of Poetry in Motion, the program that places poems in ad space on subway cars, and more practical accomplishments like in-station countdown clocks and the new connection between the uptown 6 at Bleecker Street and the nearby but formerly inaccessible BDFM at Broadway-Lafayette.

Straphangers went with a Sandy-themed point at first place for the best of 2012 as well, praising the authority for the rebound after the storm. "It was transit at its best," Straphangers wrote, "with managers and workers moving mountains."

Top 5 worst transit events in 2012

1. The MTA sustained $5 billion in damages from the storm.
2. Sandy repairs will cost riders $62 million a year in interest for decades.
3. Joe Lhota, the sixth MTA chairman in as many years, stepped down after only a year.
4. Fare hike announced in December, to take effect this March.
5. Subway crime is up: 7.38 felonies per day by late 2012.

TLC requires cabbies to watch sex-trafficking video

NEW YORK. Cabbies must watch a sex-trafficking video before getting their license, a Taxi and Limousine Commission spokesman said yesterday. The video explains how cabbies could be contributing to sex trafficking if they are driving women to their clients. The City Council recently strengthened penalties against cab drivers who are helping sex traffickers after Council testimony revealed that pimps use regular drivers as part of extensive operations to move around prostitutes. "Sex trafficking is wrong and illegal and [cab drivers] must not have anything whatsoever to do with it," TLC Commissioner David Yassky said. "This training video will help ensure that our licensees understand their obligations under the law."

New York state officials report: Fracking is safe

Fracking in New York state could be done safely, according to a state report leaked to news organizations.

Hydraulic fracturing — drilling that extracts natural gas from underground and which is known as "fracking" — has been ruled safe, according to a New York State Health Department report obtained by The New York Times.

The documents obtained by the Times surmise that the state would be able to mitigate any negative impacts from the drilling.

Emily DeSantis, spokeswoman for the Department of Environmental Conservation, cautioned that the document is a year-old report that "does not reflect final DEC policy."

The New York State Petroleum Council lauded the report, saying it should come as no surprise: "These reports confirm what has been clear for some time now: Sensible regulations can ensure safe natural gas development will protect land, water and public health."

Fracking skeptics

Many environmentalists have criticized any plans for fracking, worrying that it will contaminate drinking water.

New Yorkers Against Fracking released a statement blasting the governor and the document's "flimsy reasoning," saying, "This is truly government at its worst."

"This leaked DEA document cavalierly dismissing the health impacts of fracking confirms public fears that the pressure to allow fracking is trumping the actual concerns New Yorkers justifiably have about how the inherently dangerous process would affect their health," Sandra Steingraber of Concerned Health Professionals of New York said in a statement on behalf of the group.

New Sandy Hook school opens

GETTY IMAGES

▶ This sign welcomed children from Sandy Hook Elementary school sits on the road in Monroe, Conn., on Jan. 3, 2013.

Twenty days after the massacre that left 20 first graders and seven adults dead at Sandy Hook Elementary School in Connecticut, plunging a rural New England town and the nation into grief, classes resumed on Thursday for the more than 400 students who lived through the harrowing assault.

Across Newtown's sprawling Sandy Hook neighborhood where the attack took place, children bundled boarded buses decked in their school colors for the seven-mile journey to their new school.

Chalk Hill Middle School, an unused school in the neighboring town of Monroe, was refurbished specifically for the students from Newtown, and now bears a new but familiar name, Sandy Hook Elementary School.

Students on packed buses waved at clusters of photographers and TV cameras gathered at street corners along the bus route. Heightened security measures meant media was kept well away, but from a small plane above the new school, children getting off buses were seen running, hopping and skipping through the doors.

A steady stream of parents' cars were seen pulling up to drop students off at the main entrance, where they were greeted by a dark-suited official.

Anca Roberto, 35, put her 5-year-old daughter, a kindergartner, on the bus not far from the old Sandy Hook school, which remains a bullet-riddled crime scene closed to everyone but police.

Roberto said she had been nervous about the return to school until Wednesday, when she and her daughter attended an open house at the new location. Her daughter was thrilled to find her cubby intact, moved from the old school, and she "screeched" when she saw her friends. REUTERS

With safety foremost on the minds of parents and officials, the school has been outfitted with a new security system. Monroe Police Department officers were patrolling the grounds, and all outside doorways and sidewalks were under surveillance.

Transocean to pay $1.4B for role in gulf oil spill

WASHINGTON. Offshore rig contractor Transocean Ltd. has agreed to pay $1.4 billion to settle U.S. government charges arising from BP Plc.'s massive oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico in 2010.

The settlement unveiled Thursday by the Department of Justice includes $1 billion in civil penalties and $400 million in criminal penalties. The company set aside $1.95 billion in losses related to the Macondo well disaster, including $1.5 billion for its anticipated settlement.

Still to be reached is a Transocean settlement with the Macondo plaintiffs steering committee that represents more than 100,000 individuals and business owners claiming economic and medical damages from the spill.

UBS analyst Angie Sedita said the ultimate cost of Macondo to Transocean could end up being more than $4 billion, including a deal with the plaintiffs that may take "years to resolve." REUTERS

POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN

SHAVING THE DOG

My wife has announced her priorities for 2013, and the first item on the list is shaving the dog. We have a sheltie named Nola. She is a lovely critter, but in winter she drops her outer layers faster than Prince Harry in a pool hall. "She'll look like a whippet," I protested as Nola cowered, no doubt wondering why we were eyeing her so closely. "But I'm vacuuming up fur every 20 minutes," my wife replied. I said, "She'll be cold." She: "Buy her a sweater."

I should not be surprised. Big plans are in the air in D.C. right now. As often happens when a sitting president wins a second term, the Capitol crowd is heading into the New Year with many grand notions about addressing chronic problems. Massive schemes are in the works to deal with immigration, gun control, the debt ceiling, unemployment — and on and on the list goes. And the proponents of these plans, like my wife with her clippers, are all dreaming of grand "let's fix it once and for all" solutions.

That's not going to happen. At least history suggests it won't.

Quoted

"Most problems in Washington, like puppies, start off small. ... And they steadily grow until by the time Congress decides to neuter them, they are big, fierce Malamutes."

Why? Most problems in Washington, like puppies, start off small. They bounce around from one committee to the next. They get chased down Congressional corridors, studied and debated. And they steadily grow, until by the time Congress decides to neuter them, they are big, fierce Malamutes which have no interest in a trip to the vet's office. To be sure, virtually every one of these big ticket issues being bandied about right now have been discussed by previous administrations and earlier Congresses, which found years ago that they were already too big to be corrected with one piece of sweeping legislation.

Which is why in the coming year voters may want to look not so much for big strides from Washington, as for small steps. Those get fewer headlines to be sure, but incremental improvements have a way of adding up against seemingly insurmountable problems. And shaving the dog is not always a solution.

Fred Armisen and Carrie Brownstein on getting bigger and avoiding growing pains Why you can expect to see more of your favorite characters from the first two seasons and why you may find them in places outside of Oregon

MEGAN HOLMES / IFC

Expanding the world of 'Portlandia'

Fred Armisen and Carrie Brownstein wanted to take the comic characters they developed in the first two seasons of sketch comedy show "Portlandia" someplace new.

Playing themselves, Armisen and Brownstein venture to Seattle to recruit prospective Portland residents (and end up with Chloe Sevigny as a new roommate); as Toni and Candace, they investigate a negative review on Yelp, which requires them to actually leave their feminist bookstore. Even Spyke — Armisen's ever-cynical and hyper-local hipster bike messenger character — takes his crusade to "take back MTV" to New York City on Friday's premiere.

But Armisen and Brownstein say that putting their characters in different locales is only part of the new direction for "Portlandia."

"This year we were all about making it less conceptual and more about 'Who are these people?' and then 'Which of these scenarios do they lend themselves to?' like putting a handful of characters in conflict," says Brownstein.

Quoted

"I'm really not totally interested in crowd response as a means of gauging what to do next, creatively." BROWNSTEIN

It seems like "Portlandia" itself is in conflict. What began as a niche sketch show that skewered a city known for its quiet eccentricities has struck a universal chord. From the Season 1 launch to the Season 2 premiere, the show saw a 39 percent increase in viewers. Not bad for a show that's just as apt to cast indie rock musicians as comedic actors. In between seasons 2 and 3, they toured a live show that featured as many earnest musical performances as it did comedy bits. Armisen acknowledges that the show has a bit of an identity crisis, but he says it's liberating.

"I want to reach many people," he says. "It's a comedy show, and I guess technically it's a variety show because there's music in it. And so I have no limitations on it."

But Armisen bristles at any insinuation that "Portlandia" is a place where he can put ideas that would be "too weird" for that other comedy show he's on, "Saturday Night Live."

"There are things on 'Portlandia' that are broad," he argues. "It's hard to classify what something is, but 'SNL' historically has done some weird stuff and I would say that that show has allowed me to do some very weird things that I can't believe I've gotten away with."

Brownstein says they have focused on certain characters throughout the seasons not because they're reliable for audiences, but because of the possibilities they present.

"I'm really not totally interested in crowd response as a means of gauging what to do next, creatively. ... You can just really go down a rabbit hole with that, like trying to think from a marketing or network standpoint," she says. "It kind of has to stem from the characters that we feel the most invested in."

Pat Healy
pat.healy@metro.us

Tune in

"Portlandia" premieres Friday at 10:30 p.m. on IFC.

No sellouts

The bigger, the better

The night before this interview, we spotted Armisen at the 12.12.12 concert in Madison Square Garden, taking in some of the biggest acts in music. He says he is not at all like Spyke, that character of his who becomes enraged when somebody he doesn't approve of joins in on a trend.

"Even at my most punk, as a teenager, I embraced the biggest bands," he says. "I remember in high school, one of the biggest bands was The Police, and to me, I didn't care, and I never used the word 'sellout.' I loved The Police! I would love my Dead Kennedys and Bad Brains records, and at the same time I embraced going to see huge bands. I don't subscribe to any theory that 'big is a bad thing.' In fact, it's the opposite. It's great!"

3 Things to know about 'Downton Abbey' Season 3

COURTESY OF CARNIVAL FILM & TELEVISION LIMITED 2012 FOR MASTERPIECE

▶ "Downton Abbey" Season 3 premieres Sunday at 9 p.m. on PBS.

After World War I, England enters a period of recovery (not without drama)

In Season 2, the lords and ladies of Downton Abbey — and their loyal servants — had survived the Great War, as well as the Spanish flu pandemic (not to mention plenty of interpersonal drama). "The war brought a tremendous disruption to England and took many, many families of all sorts," says "Downton" creator Julian Fellowes, whose characters were nonetheless not immune to the casualties of war. He explains, "There were those few years when people were trying to decide: 'Was the world going to be the same as it was before? Was the future going to be completely different?' And that's really the theme of the series."

What's to come

A few more notes about the new season:

- Mary and Matthew plan a wedding but that doesn't mean they'll live happily ever after.
- We will see beloved valet Mr. Bates (Brendan Coyle) negotiate life in prison, but neither he nor his wife, housemaid Anna (Joanne Froggatt), have given up hope of his freedom.
- Conniving maid O'Brien (Siobhan Finneran) brings in a new footman, her nephew, Alfred (Matt Milne).

The fate of Downton Abbey is in question

A financial crisis at the hands of Robert, Earl of Grantham (Hugh Bonneville), potentially spells the end of his great house, his family's standing and servants' livelihoods. "[After the war], it was a toss-up in many [estate-owning] families as to whether or not it was worth the struggle to go on," Fellowes says.

As the upstairs/downstairs way of life for this entitled British clan and their employees becomes more difficult to maintain, the American Cora, Countess of Grantham (Elizabeth McGovern), will prove to be the most adept in adjusting to the changing times.

"Cora is less afraid of the future than Robert is," Fellowes says. "And now you'll start to see more and more of that because she's less afraid of expressing [her American sensibilities]. If anyone understands the world that's coming, it's Cora."

Cora's mother is a force to be reckoned with

Martha Levinson arrives from Long Island for the wedding of her granddaughter, Lady Mary (Michelle Dockery), and long-lost Downton heir, Matthew Crawley (Dan Stevens). Martha has the money to save the estate, but an American attitude that clashes with the old-school Granthams. Shirley MacLaine brings a steely wit to the role, which does not seem like such a stretch for the acclaimed actress.

"It was an extraordinary experience for me in stamina and in work ethic, because we were shooting outside in the rain and in the wind with our formal gear on and nobody seemed to notice," MacLaine recalls. "So I quickly stepped right in there and acted like I didn't notice either. I had a fabulous time. I will never forget it."

BORN TO DIE

Trey Songz and Alexandra Daddario, stars of 'Texas Chainsaw 3D' tell us how they survived shooting a punishing bloodfest

Alexandra Daddario and Trey Songz, the stars of the new "Texas Chainsaw 3D," talk to us about joining the long-running horror franchise, the perils of being in a scary movie and how their opinions of chain saws have changed.

Alexandra Daddario

LIONSGATE PUBLICITY

This is not the first "Texas Chainsaw" movie. How many of the previous films have you seen?

Trey Songz: I've seen three.

Alexandra Daddario: I've seen two. I think Trey is more of a horror fan than I am. I get scared really easily. But I watched the Jessica Biel version and the original before I did this movie.

Being a horror fan, what's your dream way to get offed in a horror movie?

TS: I mean, the ultimate thing in a horror movie is to make it through, so. [Laughs] But my dream way to get done in? I don't know. In "Saw" there were so many creative ways to die. That's what I really liked about the film, that it could actually happen if somebody was that crazy. But I haven't dreamed of ways of dying recently. [Laughs]

Acting in a horror movie, you're doing a lot of running and screaming. How exhausting is that compared to a less horrific movie?

AD: Definitely, being an actress part of what you have to do is try to stay in as best shape as you can. I knew that I was going to a very hot place — we shot in Louisiana in July and August, so I prepared. I did hot yoga and I sort of tried to prepare so I wouldn't pass out on set, and I made it through.

Having done this movie now, would you say you're both more or less afraid of chain saws?

TS: I would say chain saws are petrifying.

AD: Yes. I think I've always probably been scared of chain saws, but I've never really encountered a chain saw until this movie.

TS: It was like a whole row of them on set. ... I crept off into the trailer that you're not supposed to be in and touched them, and they were kind of like not dull. [Laughs]

AD: Yeah, they're real chain saws.

No chasing rainbows here

After failed attempts at bringing screenplays to fruition, 'Sopranos' creator David Chase finally lands his first film with 'Not Fade Away'
Why he wanted to rehire James Gandolfini

David Chase may be a seven-time Emmy-winner, but that doesn't mean he wasn't nervous arriving on set of his first feature film, "Not Fade Away."

"The first morning, you want to get out of the car and run away — at least I did — before they get you to the set. And it's kind of like that every day," he says.

What had him white-knuckled were concerns that any leader might have before taking the reins of a project.

"So many people are gonna ask you so many questions, and you might give the wrong answer," he says. "You just might not be up to the job this time, or you might be wrong. One knows that one has some weaknesses in one's craft and you're hoping that those weaknesses don't rise to the top."

To overcome his fears, Chase says he took a day-by-day approach, "chipping away at it a scene at a time."

Someone on set who might have been a source of alleviation for the director was James Gandolfini, who in the film plays an Italian New Jersey father whose son wants to be in a rock band. Initially, Gandolfini wasn't sure about taking the role, considering his past life as Tony Soprano, another Jersey Italian.

"When we talked about him doing the role he cautioned me," the director says. "He said, 'Don't you think this might be a little bit too soon?' I said, 'Yeah, there's that potential I guess.' But he was the best guy for the role and we both wanted to work together again."

And when it came time for Gandolfini to take on his character, there was no rehashing of his past life.

"We didn't say 'Don't Soprano-ize this.' He was very intent. You have to understand, he's an actor. He's a different person here. He left Tony Soprano behind when he was doing this."

John Magaro and Bella Heathcote star in David Chase's "Not Fade Away."

It's Not Too Late to Apply for Spring 2013.

Keep the cocktail, but skip the sugar

Shelf life

What we're drinking this week: The Perfect Cosmo, a new low-calorie flavored vodka from Devotion. Yes, that's the same brand that added protein to vodka in the name of fitness — we're trying to forgive more in 2013.

What it is: This one's essentially a citrus-flavored vodka designed to mix with cranberry juice — which isn't that impressive considering you can now buy vodka that smells like cake batter (can, not should, friends). But unlike some of its flavored peers, this one is completely sugar-free and doesn't contain gluten.

Mix it with: Cranberry juice is the obvious choice, but try it with orange juice for a screwdriver that'll wake you right up ... or put you right to sleep. The bottle might have angel wings and hearts on it, but it's still 80-proof.

The verdict: If you're a bartender with a mustache and/or suspenders, The Perfect Cosmo will induce a Wicked Witch-style meltdown. But if you're not too cool to order a Cosmo in the first place? Make room for this one on your shelf.

Cocktail of the week

The 2013 Cosmo

WHAT'S IN IT:
- 2 oz. Devotion The Perfect Cosmo
- 2 oz. sugar-free cranberry juice

HOW TO MAKE IT: Combine ingredients in a shaker with ice; strain into a martini glass. Garnish with a lemon peel.

This sugar-free Cosmo breaks fewer resolutions.

Eating right

You start each New Year by swearing off fries and beer, but it's hard sticking with a healthy habit when you can't figure out a guilt-free, tasty meal Consider this easy dish for your new go-to

Here's your new guilt-free go-to.

COURTESY OF CHOW

There are a bunch of ingredients in this dish, but don't let that fool you — it's still simple enough for a weeknight dinner, and you won't use every pan in the house. The key is to prepare the ingredients as you cook: The spicy peanut dressing comes together in one minute — and while the quinoa simmers, cut the tofu and vegetables (which take a few minutes to cook). Then just toss everything together for an easy, healthy, filling dinner, or lunch to bring to work.

Weekend recipe

Spicy Thai Coconut Quinoa

Dressing ingredients:

- 1⅔ cups fresh cilantro (from about 1/2 bunch), long, thick stems removed
- ¾ cup roasted, unsalted peanuts
- ⅓ cup Sriracha sauce
- 2 tablespoons finely grated lime zest (from about three medium limes)
- ¼ cup freshly squeezed lime juice (from about three medium limes)
- ¼ cup toasted sesame oil
- 1 tablespoon packed dark brown sugar
- 2 medium garlic cloves
- 1½ teaspoons kosher salt

For the quinoa:

- 2 cups quinoa, any color or variety
- 1 (14-ounce) can unsweetened coconut milk
- 1⅓ cups vegetable stock or low-sodium vegetable broth
- 1 teaspoon kosher salt, plus more as needed
- 1 (14- to 16-ounce) package firm tofu
- 2 medium carrots
- 1 medium broccoli head (about 1 pound)
- 4 medium scallions
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil

Directions:

1 Place all of the dressing ingredients in a food processor fitted with a blade attachment. Process until smooth, scraping down the sides of the bowl as needed, about one minute; set aside.

2 Rinse the quinoa in a strainer under cold water until the water runs clear. Place in a large saucepan; add the coconut milk, vegetable broth and measured salt; stir to combine. Bring to a boil over medium-high heat. Reduce the heat to low and simmer, stirring occasionally, until the white outer casings on the quinoa have popped, revealing translucent little beads, about 15 to 20 minutes.

3 Meanwhile, line a large plate with several layers of paper towels. Drain the tofu, cut it into large dice, and place it in a single layer on the paper-towel-lined plate; set aside. Trim the carrots and cut them into ⅛-inch-thick rounds; set aside. Trim the stem of the broccoli to ½ inch and cut the head into 1-inch florets; set aside. Thinly slice the white and light green parts of the scallions; set aside.

4 When the quinoa is ready, remove it to a large serving bowl and set aside. Wash the saucepan, fill it with water and season generously with salt. Cover with a tight-fitting lid and bring to a boil over high heat.

5 Meanwhile, heat the oil in a large nonstick frying pan over medium-high heat until shimmering. Add the tofu and cook without stirring until the bottoms are golden brown, about four minutes. (While the tofu is cooking, line the plate you drained it on with fresh paper towels.) Flip and cook until the other sides are golden brown, about three to four minutes more. Using a slotted spoon, remove to the paper-towel-lined plate and season with salt; set aside.

6 Add the carrots to the boiling water and cook until crisp-tender, about two minutes. Using a slotted spoon, remove them to the bowl with the quinoa. Return the water to a boil, add the broccoli and cook until crisp-tender, about three minutes. Drain in a colander and place with the quinoa and carrots.

7 Add the cooked tofu, dressing and scallions to the bowl and stir to combine. Garnish.

To garnish

- Coarsely chopped fresh cilantro
- Coarsely chopped roasted, unsalted peanuts
- Thinly sliced scallions

A roundup of regrettable celebrity permanent ink

In honor of the news that Lil' Wayne got "BAKED" tattooed above his right eye (Aren't you glad he doesn't have a real job? Can you imagine him sitting in front of HR?), The Word is compiling some of the worst celebrity tattoos.

Hayden Panettiere's side tattoo "Vivere senza rimipianti" should read "to live without regrets" in Italian. Sadly, the Italian word for "regrets" is "rimpianti," meaning her tat is misspelled. So, yeah, about that whole "living without regrets" thing ...

GREGG DEGUIRE/WIREIMAGE

GREGG DEGUIRE/WIREIMAGE

Perhaps the most famous of bad celebrity tattoo decisions was when Angelina Jolie thought getting her then-husband's name in huge letters on her arm was smart. "Billy Bob" is now gone from her arm — and public consciousness.

Steve-O's back features a giant tattoo of his face as he gives a thumbs-up, which never mind, that's pretty awesome.

Scarlett Johansson got this wrist tattoo last year. It has "I Love NY" written inside the "charm." At this point in her career, can't she afford a bracelet that's removable?

Lindsay Lohan's "shh-hh" finger tattoo isn't really working for her, is it?

Megan Fox used to have a huge tattoo of Marilyn Monroe's face on her inner arm, but she wised up and had it removed this year. "It's traumatic and it's incredibly painful. They can't numb it enough to make the pain go away," she told Jay Leno on "The Tonight Show With Jay Leno" in February about the removal process.

Music theater outlook: 2013

This year's on- and off-Broadway lineup promises mostly sentimentality — with a bit of kink thrown in for good measure

'Cinderella'
(Opens March 3, www.cinderellaonbroadway.com)
This classic started as a TV movie and has been staged many times, but never on Broadway — before now. Featuring Rodgers and Hammerstein songs like "Do I Love You Because You're Beautiful?" and "My Own Little Corner," this production tweaked the book for a fresh audience. Laura Osnes stars.

'Jekyll & Hyde'
(Opens in April, www.jekyllandhydemusical.com)
Composer Frank Wildhorn has misfired lately ("Bonnie & Clyde," "Wonderland") so it only makes sense to resurrect his good name through his best-known work from '97. It's coming back to town for a limited time following a national tour and sure to pique the attention of young theater-goers anxious to see this blast from fandom past.

MATTHEW MURPHY

▶ The cast of "Kinky Boots" comes to NYC in April.

'Kinky Boots'
(Opens April 4, www.kinkybootsthemusical.com)
Based on a true-life tale, "Kinky Boots" was made into a film in 2005 and has graduated to a musical by the same name with lyrics by Cyndi Lauper and book by Harvey Fierstein. The story follows the near-collapse of a family shoe factory that is inexplicably saved with the help of a drag queen named Lola. Despite its comedic and "fabulous" outlook, the play centers on deeper themes of acceptance.

'The Last Five Years'
(Opens April 2, www.2st.com)
Jason Robert Brown's intimate musical about the dissolution of a young couple made a mark off-Broadway in 2002 for its lyric-focused approach — not to mention its time-bending storyline. It returns for a limited time, directed by Brown himself. Although this show is certainly not one of the mega mainstream musicals passing through, it will be one to talk about.

'Matilda The Musical'
(Opens April 11, www.us.matildathemusical.com)
"Matilda" has been quite successfully running in London's West End since 2010. Based on the book by Roald Dahl, this staging adds uplifting music to underscore the magic and mischievousness inherent to the beloved children's tale.

Play begging to get panned

Amy Herzog's 'The Great God Pan' works on many levels But the production at Playwrights Horizons is dragged down by extraneous scenes, characters and the moving building-blocks set

"The Great God Pan" at Playwrights Horizons is conceptually sound. Jamie (Jeremy Strong) is a young man with a seemingly perfect life, including a blossoming journalism career and beautiful girlfriend Paige (Sarah Goldberg). Then he meets up with an old childhood friend, Frankie (Keith Nobbs), and learns that Frankie's father may have molested him when he was just 4 years old. After that initial meeting, uncomfortable clues continue to emerge as Jamie hunts down the truth about his past. The play toys with themes of memory and maturity — how we grow up and what we leave behind, purposefully or not.

But aside from the premise, the fact that the one-act is a tight 85 minutes is probably the best part of "Pan." Although well-acted all around, the play is encumbered by a clumsy set; a giant wall of moving boxes chews up time during scene transitions. If "Pan" had been staged in a black box with folding chairs, the play probably would be only an hour and just as gripping.

Entire scenes and characters could also be cut, especially those involving the boys' former babysitter (Becky Ann Baker). Now an old woman suffering from the forgetfulness of age, she's referenced enough by other characters that wheeling her onstage for one scene is redundant.

The title is drawn from Elizabeth Barrett Brown's "The Musical Instrument." The poem is delivered in the closing scene, where no concrete resolutions are offered. Like the reeds in the poem that are sundered to make a pipe and produce music, Jamie has to be broken down to become a better man. Hopefully the concept of this script — which repeatedly rests on two-person, back-and-forth dialogue as if playwright Amy Herzog is intimidated by complex discourse — can be broken down and reworked into a better production of "Pan."

Horoscope

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Even if you don't seek it, your very presence is likely to command attention. Thus, you need to be extra careful of your demeanor, because the impression you make will be lasting.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. To achieve an important objective, you need to proceed in a logical, methodical manner. If you shoot from the hip instead, the results are apt to be quite disappointing.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. It behooves you to be as tactful and pleasant as possible with colleagues. Being too critical or aggressive could result in an incident that would have serious ramifications.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. If you are required to handle a confidential matter for another, treat it with the respect you would wish if someone were doing the same for you. Remember, the buck stops with you on this one.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. It would be best to keep a disagreement with your mate to yourself. Once you allow outsiders to enter the picture, complications are likely to occur.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Since your powers of observation appear to be more acute than ever, don't focus simply on others' shortcomings while totally ignoring their good attributes.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Make sure to handle your resources as prudently as possible. Take care to avoid taking on any unnecessary long-term debt.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Guard against temptations to rehash an old, smoldering issue with another whose point of view differs considerably. Nothing will be gained except more strife.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Your frame of mind will affect how you handle pressure. Take care not to make everything you do more complicated than it needs to be.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. If you've been feeling financially squeezed, it might be smart to review your expenses to see if any can be eliminated or, at the very least, cut down.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. You can easily get tunnel vision when immersed in a project, and it could be one of those times. Flow with the majority's view instead of insisting on your way.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Premature disclosures about an important objective might be used against you. Be careful what you say to whom, and play it close to the vest.

This battle can't be won with military funding

The middle class dodged most of the bullets from the Battle of the Cliff, but the guns from the promised negotiations on spending cuts are squarely aimed at us.

The president has expressed a willingness to reduce spending on popular programs like Medicare and he's still talking about "entitlement reform," which means cuts to Social Security. Republican lawmakers are salivating at the prospect of getting these cuts.

Where in all this chatter is a mention of cuts to the bloated Pentagon budget? Numerous reports in the last couple of years document that $100 billion per year could be safely cut from military spending, with hundreds of costly overseas bases as the chief culprits of over-spending. Cutting $100 billion per year would just about eliminate the federal deficit.

Effective job creation is the best long-term solution to the budget deficit, and studies document that military spending is the least effective way to create jobs. Education, health care, renewable energy, and yes, even tax cuts, create more jobs than giving money hand over fist to the war profiteers, as we do now. Military spending has almost doubled in the last decade. It's no coincidence that jobs have declined.

Let's flip this script: First cut the Pentagon. Remember, Social Security has added not one dime to our deficit.

JANE SWIFT DUGDALE, VIA E-MAIL

Businesses have lots of spare cash — so let's take it!

Why is the U.S. government taxing individuals when big businesses are sitting on a trillion dollars?

They say they're waiting for some sign to indicate that it's time to invest. Isn't the huge number of people out of work a good sign that it's time to put at least some of that capital back into the free-market system? I think we could do with a straight sales tax instead of an income tax, myself. And you politicians, wrangling over the budget: There's your money. Go get it, I dare you.

NFL playoff predictions ... sure to go wrong

The grid: We'd bet our money ★★★ | We'd bet your money ★★ | Fat chance ★

Winners

Super Bowl picks?
Answer: Packers over Broncos
By: Mark Osborne, Metro New York sports editor
Confidence level: ★★★
I'm leaning on experience. Aaron Rodgers is by far the best QB in the NFC. And why not go with the veteran in the AFC as well? Peyton Manning's comeback comes up just short.

Answer: 49ers over Broncos
By: Mike Greger, Metro Philadelphia sports editor
Confidence level: ★★★
We've changed our pick five times since you started reading. In the end, we're putting our trust in the NFL's best defense. They got injuries, but they'll be waiting when Peyton chokes.

Losers

Can Houston recover from their slump?
Answer: Buh-bye.
Confidence level: ★★
Matt Schaub and the Texans have felt the cruel sting of reality after getting off to an 11-1 start. Now they are playing on wild-card weekend and are just four-point favorites. It's over, Houston fans (do they exist?). Gary Kubiak isn't getting you over the hump.

Can Matt Ryan win a playoff game?
Answer: Yes.
Confidence level: ★
Believe it or not, Matt Ryan still hasn't won a playoff game. You'd be forgiven for thinking he'd won a few considering the praise heaped on him all season. The Falcons carry the No. 1 seed into the NFC and they better win a game this year. Arthur Blank is getting restless.

Goodbyes

Will Baltimore send off Ray Lewis right?
Answer: No.
Confidence level: ★★
The number of emotional stories in these playoffs are crazy — Chuck Pagano, Peyton Manning, and now Ray Lewis's retirement. It'd be a classic story to see the Ravens rally for their leader's goodbye, but games are played on the field and the Ravens aren't winning.

Will Manning retire a champion?
Answer: Yes, next year.
Confidence level: ★
We have to note the relationship of Peyton Manning playing for John Elway and walking off a winner. Manning could do it this year, but why not pull the full Elway and win back-to-back titles this year and next and then ride off into the sunset?

Off the field

Can the Jets steal the spotlight?
Answer: Of course.
Confidence level: ★★★
There is zero chance the Jets won't be a bigger headline at some point during the playoffs than the teams actually playing. The real question is for what. I'd go with Tim Tebow and Mark Sanchez both being cut. And maybe starting a boy band together. Why not?

Will Barack Obama watch the Redskins?
Answer: Yes.
Confidence level: ★
There's a decent chance the universe caves in on itself if Barack Obama and Robert Griffin III appear in the same location together. Joe Buck might have a stroke. But we digress. Let's hope Obama shows and ditches those loser Bears.

Ladies only

Which rookie QB has best NFL WAG?
Answer: Andrew Luck.
Confidence level: ★★
Russell Wilson appears odd man out again. Andrew Luck will win Rookie of Year. Robert Griffin III will be Rookie Offensive Player of Year. Best WAG? Just like the awards, it's a close call … however, we are going with Luck's girl, Nicole Pechanec, since she's a gymnast. Yes, gymnast.

Will Beyonce make us forget beer?
Answer: Hopefully.
Confidence level: ★
It's been a long, long time since the Super Bowl had a halftime show worth watching. (Seriously, Madonna?) But this year, instead of racing to the kitchen for beer, we'll have our eyes glued on Beyonce — and secretly hope for a repeat of Nipplegate.

Source: Jets eye Turner

The Jets may have moved on from offensive coordinator Tony Sparano before even parting ways with him.

A league source told Metro New York that the Jets have expressed an interest in recently fired Chargers head coach Norv Turner. Per the source, the Jets like what Turner, considered an offensive mastermind, could do in turning around an offense ranked No. 30 in the league. The Jets fired general manager Mike Tannenbaum on Monday, but have not yet parted ways with Sparano.

Turner to the Jets might be a long shot right now, as the source speculated that Turner may be turned off by the Jets' lack of weapons and would prefer a head coaching position over a return to his roots as a coordinator.

Norv's file

Turner has spent 13 seasons in the NFL with three different teams.
